The City and the Stars, Arthur C. Clarke The City and the Stars is a science fiction novel by British writer Arthur C. Clarke, published in 1956. The City and the Stars takes place one billion years in the future, in the city of Diaspar. By this time, the Earth is so old that the oceans have gone and humanity has all but left.

The City and the Stars by Arthur C. Clarke

The City and the Stars was written in 1956 and is written with extraordinary vision and sight into what the future may contain. Arthur C. Clarke shows why he is considered a grand master of science fiction with this fantastic novel. The Sands of Mars is, in my mind, not quite on par with the first novel.

In "The City and the Stars", Arthur C. Clarke envisions mankind having fallen into two cultural niches, each limited by their own approaches to life. Diaspar, a city in which some 10 million people lives have been extended by technology to 1000 years, and each life ends when its personality is encoded into a nearly omnipotent computer for later reincarnation, has become the womb of humanity.

The City and the Stars by Arthur C. Clarke My rating: 4 of 5 stars Read for the Science Fiction Masterworks Book Club. This is one of the great classics of science fiction by one of the Triumvirate (the others, of course, being Isaac Asimov and Robert A. Heinlein.)In a city in the far future, the human race has achieved immortality of a sort.

Book Review: The City and the Stars by Arthur C. Clarke ...

The City and the Stars reminds me of a couple of other novels, which are interesting to contrast. The first of these is William Hope Hodgson's 1912 novel The Night Land, also about a future where the Earth has become uninhabitable and humanity is hiding within a final refuge, known as The Last Redoubt in Hodgson's novel. The Night Land is a very dark novel, where humans are seeking shelter ...
